Toni McWilliams is a native of Chicago, Illinois, who carries a deep commitment to compassionately share her message of hope with survivors of domestic violence and military sexual trauma. She previously served in the U.S. Army from 2005-2011 and was deployed to Iraq multiple times where she contributed to combat operations. Her military career included operating as a Logistic Specialist, and fulfilling leadership positions, ultimately retiring as a Sergeant. Toni's dedication and contribution to the mission, notably during deployments, led to several commendations from her leadership.

Toni is a disabled veteran who now dedicates her efforts to educating others on having hope and to raise awareness about the benefits of trauma supportive services. She speaks at various small events, workshops, and seminars sharing her experiences as a wounded warrior navigating the treatment process, overcoming the multiple traumas she has experienced in her journey of post-traumatic growth and resiliency. Toni is blessed with two young children and thoroughly enjoys all the family time and outdoor recreation opportunities she has available.
